Job Purpose

Intensive Family Support Worker

As part of our new Highland wide Intensive Family Support Service, our team provides flexible intensive family support working with young people aged 12 to 18 who are at risk of criminal exploitation, or who are at risk of being accommodated away from their families.

We work intensively over 12 weeks to support young people and their families, ensuring they receive the right support at the right time, building on their strengths and reducing the need for statutory supports.

We work across the Highlands in close partnership with Social Work, Police and Education to provide multi-agency, wrap around support for young people and their families, keeping them safe and together. This post will focus on Fort William and surrounding areas.

By adopting Right Theres' People First approach, the Family Support Worker will build trusted relationships, help young people identify their goals and needs, and work alongside families to create positive change. You will provide practical and emotional support across a range of areas including wellbeing, education, safety planning, substance use and family relationships.

About Right There

We are a charity that recently celebrated 200 years of standing alongside people in Scotland. Last year we supported almost 4,000 people to stay in their homes and stay connected to the people they love.

We provide tailored support for people, at home and in the community. We are here for people living with the effects of homelessness, poverty, addiction or family breakdown. We meet people where they are, with no judgement – walking alongside them and offering the right support at the right time.

Everyone's story is unique, and everyone's route home is different, so we tailor our response to the individual. Our approach is about building trusting relationships and nurturing people's strengths, and our 200 staff, mentors and volunteers are at the heart of it.
